These include the particular attributes of the mineral deposit including the quantity and quality of the ore, proximity to or cost to develop infrastructure for extraction, financing costs, mineral prices and the competitive nature of the industry.

c. Governmental regulations including those relating to prices, taxes, royalties, land tenure and use, the environment and the importing and exporting of minerals are of key importance to the Issuer. The effects of these factors cannot be accurately predicted, but any combination of them may result in the Issuer not receiving an adequate return on invested capital.

d. Substantial expenditures are also required to establish reserves, to develop processes to extract the resources and, in the case of new properties, to develop the extraction and processing facilities and infrastructure at any site chosen for extraction. In the absence of cash flow from operations, the Issuer relies on capital markets and joint venture partners to fund its exploration and evaluation
