The after-school initiative program is operated by BlackOwned.com which seeks to unite and catalyze the efforts of black business people to generate value in American society.

"Our mission is to help African Americans learn about their heritage by overhauling how Black history is taught in schools," stated Pamela F. Nichols, President of BlackOwned, CEO of Black Owned Institute and Black Talent Hub. "We are excited to launch our Black History Month program featuring ImagineAR's augmented reality platform available on any mobile phone which will enhance our distribution and help build our AR network for future programs.

Educators and students will be asked to download the ImagineAR app and scan an African Historical image to instantly experience the video on their mobile phone. In the future, ImagineAR's platform will create trophy cards to be used for social media programs to extend program awareness and create fun interaction for the students.

Neal Bendesky, Vice President of Sales for ImagineAR Inc., said, "We are proud to support the BlackOwned and their Black Owned Institute for their enhanced school outreach program. Pamela Nichols and CEO Quentin Anderson's commitment as a stakeholder in African Historical Studies is the type of leadership that represents necessary strides in our country. We're excited to utilize our platform to create social media activations and build the BlackOwned's AR community as they strive to generate support for their youth education activities."

The BlackOwned and ImagineAR partnership was recently nurtured by ImagineAR CEO Alen Paul Silverrstieen, along with Mr. Anderson who owns the domain BlackOwned.com which will serve as the central location for activating all augmented reality elements for the Black History Month program. Participants can download the ImagineAR app free from the App Store and point their mobile device using SCAN AN AR TARGET to activate the relevant images.

"BlackOwned.com is about cutting-edge technology, education, health and entertainment. We are looking forward to engaging with students globally and adding more partners to grow our program. ImagineAR's advanced platform with business links can help us accomplish our objectives," added Mr. Quentin Anderson.
