About Flow Metals

Flow Metals Corp. is a Canadian mineral exploration company focused on advancing high-potential projects in proven mining districts. The Company’s flagship Yukon Sixtymile Project is in a historic placer gold camp with over a century of production where Flow Metals is targeting the bedrock source of coarse gold mineralization through modern structural and geophysical techniques. Flow Metals also holds exposure to critical metals discovery potential through its New Brenda Project, a porphyry copper-molybdenum system in southern British Columbia situated within the prolific Quesnel Terrane. The Company is committed to a disciplined, technology-driven exploration strategy designed to generate high-impact discoveries.
