

Digital Commodities Increases Bitcoin Holdings Through Purpose Bitcoin ETF Investment

Vancouver, British Columbia--(Newsfile Corp. - October 28, 2025) - Digital Commodities Inc. (CSE: DIGI) (OTCQB: DGCMF) (FSE: W040) ("Digital Commodities" or the "Company"), an investment company focused on Bitcoin, gold, and selective investments in public and private companies, is pleased to announce that it has increased its Bitcoin exposure through the purchase of 17,023 units of the Purpose Bitcoin ETF (TSX: BTCC) at an average price of C$20.79 per unit, representing a total investment of approximately C$354,000. This purchase adds the equivalent of 2.2 Bitcoin (BTC) to the Company's holdings.

This acquisition represents an average underlying Bitcoin purchase price of approximately US$115,000 per BTC, inclusive of all costs and fees and was executed through the Toronto Stock Exchange. The transaction aligns with Digital Commodities' ongoing strategy of building exposure to scarce, non-fiat assets that can serve as both stores of value and hedges against monetary debasement.

Following this transaction, Digital Commodities' total Bitcoin exposure, both directly and via exchange-traded funds, now exceeds 13 Bitcoin (BTC).

"This investment reflects our continued conviction in Bitcoin's long-term relevance as a resilient asset class," said Brayden Sutton, CEO of Digital Commodities. "We remain confident in its role as a core digital store of value, and we'll continue to build disciplined exposure to both Bitcoin and other hard assets that align with our long-term investment philosophy."
