December was focused on catching up on activities that were put on hold due to the focus on the aging test work done in October and November. Activities included: developing a link in Aether's internal aging protocols versus the OEM recommended aging cycle; evaluating magnitude of aging stressors such as water content and gas flow rates; and further improvement in catalyst fabrication techniques which has resulted in a small further improvement in catalyst aging robustness.

Also, in December, Aether started putting plans in place for a filtering plug that would catch any catalyst material that may come off during operation or aging. This work was sparked by some material depositing on the outlet of the aging tube and Aether has decided to proactively understand what the material is and reduce the quantity leaving the system.
