

FANTASY 6 PARTNERING WITH BTL GROUP TO BRING BLOCKCHAIN TECHNOLOGY TO FANTASY SPORTS INDUSTRY

Vancouver, British Columbia, Canada (Monday, September 12, 2016) – Fantasy 6 Sports Inc. (“Fantasy 6” or the “Company”) (CSE:FYS)(OTC:FNTYF)(FRANKFURT:6F6 - WKN:A2AKL8) announces it is partnering with BTL Group Ltd. (TSX VENTURE:BTL) (“BTL” or the “BTL Group”) to create a suite of blockchain services designed specifically for fantasy sports companies. This strategic partnership is intended to consolidate Fantasy 6’s vision for technological leadership and innovation in the fantasy sports industry.

The Fantasy 6-BTL Group partnership comes just one week after BTL announced a project with Visa Europe Collab to explore potential applications for blockchain technology in the financial services ecosystem.

“We are thrilled to have the opportunity to work with our friends at BTL Group in ways we’re convinced will generate significant added value and confidence in the fantasy sports industry,” said Shafin Diamond Tejani, Chief Executive Officer of Fantasy 6. “Our partnership will be focused on the implementation of blockchain technology in fantasy sports, beginning with security and transparency, and we see a high ceiling for the results of our collaboration with BTL.”

BTL Group will team up with Fantasy 6 in the development, testing and installation of a proprietary SecurePlay platform that could transform the way games and contests are conducted and transactions carried out in the fantasy sports industry. SecurePlay will leverage BTL Group’s leading blockchain technology.

“This was a natural strategic partnership and practical alignment for BTL given the Fantasy 6 commitment to best practices and client-centered processes in fantasy sports,” said BTL Group Chief Executive Officer Guy Halford-Thompson. “We are excited to be developing the SecurePlay platform which is using our core blockchain technology. The platform will initially be going live with Fantasy 6-owned FansUnite.com and then other leading fantasy sports companies throughout North America and around the world.”

Fantasy 6 is using the platform developed by FansUnite as its primary platform for games and contests, including the $100,000,000 NFL Pick ‘Em Challenge that is kicking off today.

“Security is a fundamental tenet of our approach to fantasy sports and protecting both the integrity of our games and contests and our valued relationship with our players is a fundamental priority for the Company,” said Ray Walia, Chief Operating Officer of Fantasy 6. “We believe the developmental output from our partnership with BTL Group will take our commitment to security and transparency to the next level and consolidate our leadership position in the field.”

BTL and VISA (through the Visa Europe innovation hub Collab) announced their partnership last week. The European pilot is designed to usher in new levels of security, compliance and efficiency in interbank payment and settlement through smart contracts and blockchain, also known as distributed ledger technology. The partnership is built upon BTL’s blockchain-based technology platform known as Interbit, one widely-recognized for how it addresses privacy and scalability.
