Lotus Sees Strong Demand and an Undersupply of High-Quality Product in the Market

Vancouver Canada, October 19, 2020 – Lotus Ventures Inc. (“Lotus” or the “Company”) (CSE: J) (FRA: LV9) (OTC: LTTSF) comments in response to BNN Bloomberg’s article published on Friday, October 16, 2020 in regard to ‘Too much (cannabis) cultivation’ being narrated across Canada. From a macro industry analysis, this is a reasonable premise but in the Company’s experience some segments of the cannabis sector can thrive. Over the past quarter, Lotus has been able to sell-through 100% of production for its highly demanded cannabis flower. We attribute our success on the sale side to our consistent production of premium-craft product.

As recently reported by the Ontario Cannabis Store, during the April 1, 2020 to June 30, 2020 period, cannabis flower with a THC% greater than 20% sold 101x and 161x more on the Ontario Cannabis Store website and in retail stores, respectively.

Source: Ontario Cannabis Store – A Quarterly Review

During the June to October period, Lotus’ cannabis flower averaged a THC% of approximately 25% and the Company saw an increased demand for its product nationally on a wholesale basis. The Company’s internal research also indicates a 1.2% market share of total sales in the Ontario flower market since its collaborative strain launch with Kolab Project. With our low cost of production and the strong demand for a premium product, Lotus has the opportunity and the reason to expand production further in a market that has lagged on the need for product quality.
