The Issuer’s has advanced its tailings remediation and precious metals recovery operations in Central America during the period.

The Issuer’s business is environmental reclamation and precious metal recovery. The Issuer is pursuing business opportunities in Central and South America. As part of its business, the Issuer is applying innovative technologies to reprocess artisanal tailings to achieve soil remediation and metals extraction.

The Issuer is engaged in artisanal tailings remediation focused on Central America with expansion targets across Central and South America. The opportunities pursued by the Company arise from artisanal mine tailings and recycling in these regions.

Whilst most tailings operations enjoy low operational costs, Newlox’s approach benefits from higher grades characteristic of artisanal tailings due to the inefficiency of artisanal mineral processing techniques. In addition to precious metals recovery, the company’s processing technology is designed to remediate artisanal tailings and remove historical pollution.

Newlox has built its first tailings processing plant in Costa Rica after two rounds of research and development with the Company’s technical advisors at the Norman B. Keevil Institute of Mining Engineering at the University of British Columbia.

Having completed the optimization work at the Company’s first processing plant, Newlox is poised to begin commercial operations. Newlox plans to start commercial operations at a rate of 20 tonnes per day and operate monthly precious metals recovery cycles.

Newlox’s operations team plan to increase plant throughput to 30 tonnes per day in the second month of steady-state operations before growing to 40 tonnes per day in the third month. Throughput is expected to continue to increase month-over-month during 2019, reaching the targeted 80 tonnes per day level before year-end.
