Due to global demand, prices of metals have appreciated significantly during the last few years. Barring any unforeseen events, it is generally expected that the worldwide demand for metals will continue for the foreseeable future. Should this trend continue, it is expected that minerals prospects of merit will be more difficult and expensive to acquire, and furthermore, it will be more difficult and expensive for mineral exploration companies to acquire and utilize the services of professional individuals and companies who provide their services to the mineral exploration sector. Moreover, changing conditions in the financial markets may have a direct impact on the Issuer's ability to raise capital.

In addition, resource exploration and development is a speculative business, characterized by a number of significant risks and trends including, among other things:

- 1. Mineral exploration and development involves a high degree of risk which even a combination of experience, knowledge and careful evaluation may not be able to mitigate. There is no assurance that the Issuer's mineral exploration and development activities will result in any discoveries of commercial bodies of ore. The long-term profitability of the Issuer's operations will be in part directly related to the cost and success of its exploration programs, which may be affected by a number of factors.

2. Governmental regulations, including those regulations governing the protection of the environment, taxes, labour standards, occupational health, waste disposal, mine safety and other matters, could have an adverse impact on the Issuer and,
3. While the Issuer has reviewed and is satisfied with the title to the claims comprising the Property, and, to the best of its knowledge, such title is in good standing, there is no guarantee that titles to such claims will not be challenged or impugned. The Issuer's properties may be subject to prior unregistered agreements of transfer or aboriginal land claims, and title may be affected by undetected defects.
4. In absence of cash flows from operations the Issuer relies on capital markets to funds its exploration in order to achieve its exploration targets.
