Organic Potash Corporation announces that Dr. Martin Woode has entered into a contract with OPC to provide consulting services

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

October 18th, 2011

Toronto, Ontario, October 18th, 2011 – Organic Potash Corporation (CNSX: GOP) (“OPC” or the “Corporation”), is pleased to announce that Dr. Martin Woode has entered into a contract with OPC to provide consulting services during the critical phase of infrastructure and technology implementation at the Takoradi processing plant in Ghana. Dr. Woode will be relocating to Ghana to oversee the development of the Takoradi processing plant. Dr. Woode is a published expert and lecturer in the field of chemical engineering and has over 20 years experience in advanced chemical technology development. Dr. Woode is the inventor and patent holder, of the processing technology, for which OPC has been granted an exclusive license for West Africa.

Mrs. Heather Welner, President and CEO stated: “We are extremely fortunate to have Dr. Woode assisting us in overseeing the construction of the Takoradi processing plant. Having Dr. Woode onsite will assist us in minimizing the time required to begin operations and commencing the process of converting agricultural waste into 99%+ pure potassium carbonate. This time savings, will allow OPC to get its product to market sooner which will be beneficial to all shareholders in the Corporation. Dr. Woode and all of us at OPC, share the same passion, vision and view that cocoa husk ashing has the potential of creating jobs for the rural youth and women in the cocoa growing communities of Ghana. This will stem rural-urban migration and improve the livelihoods of many Ghanaian’s.”
