FOUNDER OF MEDICAL CANNABIS COUNCIL TO JOIN GCAC AUSTRALIA BOARD

Vancouver, British Columbia, Canada, September 21, 2017 – Global Cannabis Applications Corp. (“GCAC” or the “Company”) (CSE:APP, FWB:2FA, OTCQB:FUAPF), a leading developer of innovative data technologies for the cannabis industry, is pleased to announce Adam Miller, founder of the Medical Cannabis Council, will be joining the Board of Directors of Global Cannabis Apps Corporation (Australia) Pty. Ltd. (“GCAC Australia”), the Company’s 61% subsidiary in Australia.

“I am so pleased that Adam is now joining GCAC Australia’s board!” said Brad Moore, CEO of GCAC and Chairman of the Board of GCAC Australia. “Having such an esteemed board member with a wealth of proven business and leadership experience will help create the vision of GCAC Australia as a leader in medical cannabis.”

Adam Miller completed his Bachelors of Business Entrepreneurship at the Royal Melbourne Institute of Technology and Sweden's Jönköping University for International Business in 2009. Over the past seven years, Mr. Miller has worked in the field of disruptive innovation, with a specific focus on education and community building technology. In 2015, he became involved in the medical cannabis space due to his passion for the medicine and belief in innovation stimulating its growth. In 2016, he founded BuddingTech, Australia’s first medical cannabis innovation coordination program, developing networks and collaborations, including the facilitation and management of three student research projects on medical cannabis in conjunction with the University of Sydney’s Business School and MGC Pharmaceuticals, producing Australia’s first Medical Cannabis White Paper. Since working with the University of Sydney, Mr. Miller has engaged with a number of universities in Australia, forming a strategic collaborative relationship for a wide aperture of projects. With strong connections in the startup ecosystem and the medical cannabis industry, Adam Miller recently hosted Australia's first medical cannabis innovation event 'Seedlings'.

In addition, he has worked to create a unifying voice for the medical cannabis industry in Australia through the founding of the Medical Cannabis Council. As Australia’s first national medical cannabis industry body, the council facilitates a framework of best practice and supports the positioning of Australia as a world leader in research and production of safe, scientifically-backed medical cannabis products.

Mr. Miller commented, “Medical cannabis provides an unparalleled opportunity for companies like GCAC Australia with the team, technology and resources to become leaders in Australia and in over forty other countries around the world.”
