Gabriel Napora states: “We made Spoken Word to speak to the complex issue of police shootings and tried to look at the issue from every angle. I think what we’ve been able to create is a film that is both powerful and deep. And working with director Ilan Srulovicz, and actors Lance Reddick, Troy Evans and Jason London was a real pleasure. When you are working with talented people like that you always come out looking great.”

MANIFF is a rising star in its own right as it has already garnered an industry nod with its nomination as the only film festival in the world within the coveted 2016 UK Festival Awards, and the 2017 festival's program has promised to be jammed packed with rising and established names from international and domestic cinema.
